

Talking Points

IFAPAC - NAIFA'S Political Action Committee

- With the 2024 presidential election cycle already underway, it's important to remember the valuable work that NAIFA and IFAPAC achieve for your business and bottom line.
- To reach your business goals, we need policymakers in Washington, D.C., and state governments who understand our mission-critical priorities [provide examples, drawing from both federal and state issues, i.e., favorable tax treatment of our products, worker classification, supporting the best-interest standard of care, etc.].
- One of the most valuable tools we have at our disposal to educate and gain access to elected officials is our political action committee, IFAPAC.
- As you know, it takes money, people, and other vital resources to run a successful business, and it takes the same to win a successful campaign. IFAPAC helps our industry support candidates for federal and states offices in their efforts to win elections and serve state legislatures or on Capitol Hill.
- Political Action Committees are one of the most transparent forms of political involvement. The Federal Election Commission regulates PACs. All resources flowing in and out of a PAC must be disclosed publicly. You can learn more about NAIFA's federal PAC (NAIFAPAC) activities on our website or by looking at the public record (Center for Responsive Politics or Federal Election Commission).
- All PACs under the IFAPAC umbrella act on a nonpartisan basis; IFAPAC is beholden to no political party. We support Republican, Democrat and independent candidates for federal and state offices who will listen, collaborate and advocate on our behalf in Washington, D.C., and state capitals nationwide.
- IFAPAC is voluntary, member-funded, and directed PAC. The money raised comprises personal contributions from association members who understand that our collective voice is the most potent and effective way to advance our agenda and protect the bottom line.
- As your state's IFAPAC Chair, I recognize that we need a strong PAC, so I contribute the maximum amount each year.
- With another important election to be held next year, understanding the value of political engagement and the need to strengthen our political resources has never been more vital. Please join our effort and support the PAC with your personal contribution.
